

Knowledge Base

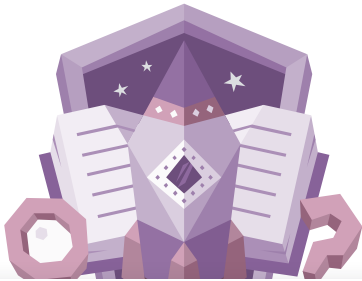

Theory

Country Profiles

 Core Theory

Personality Roles Defined

16Personalities

Roles are a way of grouping the 16 personality types based on their shared personality traits. The Role layer influences how we think, connect with others, and engage with the world.

What Are Roles?

In our personality framework, each personality type is shaped by a combination of four core personality traits – plus a fifth dimension (Assertive/Turbulent) that underpins all others.

Roles are a way of grouping the 16 personality types based on two shared core traits – specifically, the two personality traits which form that Role's most recognizable qualities. Together, these shared traits combine to influence our goals, interests, and preferred activities.

There are four personality Role groups:

Analysts: Fiercely independent, open-minded, and strong-willed

Diplomats: Deeply cooperative, imaginative, and empathetic

Sentinels: Highly practical, focused on order, security and stability

Explorers: Spontaneous, practical, and utilitarian

Understanding your Role helps you understand why certain personality types think and operate similarly, and why people who differ on just one or two traits can still feel surprisingly alike.

What's your role?

Take our free personality test to find out!

Take the free test

The Analyst Role

Shared Traits: Intuitive (N) and Thinking (T)

Personality Types: INTJ (Architect), INTP (Logician), ENTJ (Commander), ENTP (Debater)

Analysts combine imaginative, visionary thinking with a preference for logic and rational analysis. They look beyond the obvious to find patterns, challenge assumptions, and develop original ideas. Their intellectual independence is a defining strength, though it can occasionally create friction with those who prioritize emotion or tradition over reasoned argument.

Read more about the Analyst Role.

The Diplomat Role

Shared Traits: Intuitive (N) and Feeling (F)

Personality Types: INFJ (Advocate), INFP (Mediator), ENFJ (Protagonist), ENFP (Campaigner)

Diplomats blend big-picture thinking with deep empathy, orienting their energy toward meaningful connection and positive change. They are guided by strong values and a genuine care for others' well-being, which makes them natural bridge-builders and inspiring figures in their communities. Their idealism is a powerful motivator – though it can sometimes make the gap between what is and what could be feel especially hard to accept.

Read more about the Diplomat Role.

The Sentinel Role

Shared Traits: Observant (S) and Judging (J)

Personality Types: ISTJ (Logistician), ISFJ (Defender), ESTJ (Executive), ESFJ (Consul)

Sentinels notice what's real and immediate. They're grounded and reliable, with a strong preference for order and stability – bringing structure, follow-through, and responsibility to everything they take on. Their consistency makes them indispensable in both their personal and professional lives, though it can sometimes make adapting to unexpected change more difficult.

Read more about the Sentinel Role.

The Explorer Role

Shared Traits: Observant (S) and Prospecting (P)

Personality Types: ISTP (Virtuoso), ISFP (Adventurer), ESTP (Entrepreneur), ESFP (Entertainer)

Explorers are adaptable, practical, and at their best when fully engaged with the present moment. They're sharply aware of their surroundings and respond by drawing on their hands-on experience rather than abstract theory. Their spontaneity and flexibility make them effective in unpredictable or fast-moving situations, though it can be challenging for them to sustain long-term goals.

Read more about the Explorer Role.

Understanding Your Role

Understanding what personality Role you fall under is one step toward understanding yourself more fully. It reflects some of the most consistent patterns in how you process information, make decisions, and engage with the people around you.

These patterns don't define every aspect of who you are – your full personality type and individual experiences shape that – but they do help explain why certain ways of thinking and operating in the world feel natural while others require more deliberate effort.

Share this article

Discover your personality type

Join over 1 billion people and take our free personality test to uncover your unique personality type. It only takes 10 minutes and it has a 91.2% accuracy rating.

Take the test

Explore all personality types

Architect

INTJ-A / INTJ-T

Logician

INTP-A / INTP-T

Commander

ENTJ-A / ENTJ-T

Debater

ENTP-A / ENTP-T

Advocate

INFJ-A / INFJ-T

Comments

Please log in to join the discussion.

Viewing 1-4 of 4

Donald s Seidel

🕒 2 years ago

I have always enjoyed studying humanity and human interaction simply because it gives me a better ability to help others to be better and happier.

Anonymous

🕒 2 years ago

i just think its SO intresting and totally helps me think about the person and understand what they will do or their actions!

Shichi

🕒 1 year ago

this! except its for observing others and trying to figure out why we live- which is technically helping, right?

Love Stricker

🕒 3 years ago

Thanks for this article! I'm going to print it out for my phycology class. This breaks it down pretty well. (3

THE HELP PROJECT

🕒 3 years ago

This describes me very well! Personality typing is so interesting. It's like they read your mind!

Anonymous

🕒 6 years ago

A very clear representation of the four roles involved in personality typing. It gives a good insight into the main characteristics of each role. For example, this explains why an INTJ is quite different from an ISTJ and why an ENFP differs significantly from an ESFP. Additionally, it clearly indicates why ENTJs - for instance - are closer to INTPs than to ESTJs.
